MIAMI – May 4, 2017 – As part of its commitment to provide maximum value to clients, Meland Budwick, P.A. today announced the firm's deployment of new digital practices and ongoing advanced digital training.

The firm is embracing innovative technologies to support its litigation efforts, thereby offering more effective and efficient legal services for clients. For example, it is using artificial intelligence to power its legal research. The firm also is using iPads to eliminate the need for paper exhibits at depositions and hearings, as well as to offer presentations at key hearings using Prezi, presentation software that uses motion, zoom, and spatial relationships.

Moreover, the firm is partnering with Productive Power, a digital productivity firm, to provide attorneys with ongoing advanced digital training. Systematically processing the inflow of electronic information enables the firm's attorneys to more quickly address their clients' needs and increase efficiency and productivity. Attorneys are receiving customized one-on-one training, focused on a series of best practices designed to optimize workflow.

> "Our advanced digital practices further differentiate our firm for our commitment to continuously raise the bar and deliver outstanding service," said Mark Meland, a firm partner and co-founder. "We want to ensure that our attorneys remain at the leading edge of utilizing the latest digital tools in the most advanced manner."
