Meland Budwick, P.A. has expanded its Real Estate and Corporate Group with the addition of commercial real estate attorney Dan Matos as a partner.

Matos advises developers, investors, and lenders on sophisticated commercial real estate transactions involving acquisitions, development, joint ventures, financing and commercial leasing. His work has included representing syndicated lenders in a $1 billion financing for the acquisition and improvement of property in Times Square and negotiating the formation of a joint venture for a significant multifamily acquisition in Queens.

“Dan brings valuable experience handling complex real estate transactions at leading law firms in Miami and New York,” said Mark Meland, co-founder and chair of the firm’s Real Estate and Corporate Group. “His background in joint ventures, financing and acquisitions complements the work we do for developers, investors, lenders and other real estate clients. We are pleased to welcome him to the firm.”

“I am excited to join Meland Budwick and contribute to the continued growth of its real estate practice,” Matos said. “The firm has an excellent reputation for handling sophisticated transactions while providing practical, responsive counsel, and I look forward to working with the team and serving our clients.”

Prior to joining Meland Budwick, Matos practiced at leading national and international law firms in Miami and New York, where he represented developers, institutional investors, and lenders in matters throughout the United States.

Matos earned his J.D. from Cornell Law School, and his B.B.A., magna cum laude, from Florida International University. He is admitted to practice in Florida and New York and is fluent in Spanish.
