Meland Budwick, P.A. is pleased to announce the launch of its Health Law practice, expanding the firm's capabilities to represent healthcare providers, medical groups, and whistleblowers in government investigations, False Claims Act litigation, and compliance matters.

The practice is led by partner Will Rosenzweig, a former Assistant United States Attorney in the Southern District of Florida who spent five years prosecuting fraud and financial crimes through trial and appeal, including three years as part of South Florida's federal health care fraud strike force.

"Having sat on the government's side of these investigations, I know firsthand what draws scrutiny and what it takes to respond effectively," Rosenzweig said. "That perspective is what we bring to every client, whether we're defending a provider or representing a whistleblower coming forward with evidence of fraud."

The practice represents clients on both sides of healthcare fraud disputes, including physicians and medical groups facing government scrutiny under the Anti-Kickback Statute and Stark Law, providers responding to subpoenas and civil investigative demands from the Department of Justice, HHS-OIG, and state Medicaid Fraud Control Units, and individuals with firsthand knowledge of fraud who are considering or pursuing whistleblower claims. The practice also handles related internal investigations, compliance audits, commercial litigation, and real estate matters for healthcare industry clients.
